Let's discuss. We should give serious consideration to emergency listing one or more of these species if there is justification. In light of the news that one of the other Hawaiian candidates is going to be recommended from removal from candidate status because it is extinct (!) I am not anxious to have any other species end up in the same situation without at least trying to get them some added attention via emergency listing -- if that's appropriate. Karen doesn't think the case has been made to emergency list these and questions the benefit it would have. I'm not so sure -- and particularly with just two individuals left of Phyllostegia hispida it seems to me that we ought to take a very hard look at emergency listing at least that one.

I'm really not convinced of the need for emergency listing for these 3 plants - they definitely need listing but I don't see a good rationale for the emergency. See what you think. I told Paul I would provide him some feedback this week. I also asked Doug to take a look at these since he dealt with the Miami blue "emergency". I also let Marj know what the region wanted to do (so she can work with them on the budget aspects, etc.).

Subject 3 emergency listings

I'll call Karen Anderson tomorrow about the emergency listings. Meanwhile, here are some comments on the forms. I tried to incorporate some of the things we talked about with Scott on the Astelia.

As soon as you get these back to me, I'll forward them to WO.

Thanks, Paul
