

Letters to the Editor

Help Preserve Wildlife

Exciting news that Great Lakes piping plovers successfully reproduced this year on Little Traverse Bay. Petoskey Audubon, Department of Natural Resources and others helped protect these pretty birds and their chicks.

Endangered Species Act protection is clearly helping plovers and other wildlife survive and recover. The Act is America's most important wildlife law, and it works, but the Bush administration and some anti-conservation politicians are unethically trying to dismantle it.

Speak up now to defend the Endangered Species Act, which conserves our natural heritage for future generations and enhances our quality of life.

Daniel R. Patterson
Burt Lake