

Acknowledgements

During the 3 years of this project, we have downloaded papers from 9 online data bases, employed the co-operation of 15 PhD's, 4 senior researchers and 19 librarians of 13 Libraries, and staff from 13 Museums, 7 Universities and 9 Organizations from 15 countries on 5 continents to bring together 774 papers, published in 11 languages, culminating in an excess of 1,800 pages of data. During this effort, we have had the privilege of working with some truly talented and insightful people. The following list of individuals deserve special recognition for their tremendous help in locating, copying, scanning, mailing, or otherwise sifting through the last 250 years worth of literature for a tiny handful of particularly valuable descriptions of the Earth's owls. We couldn't have been successful in this project without you.
