

Washington Examiner

> Letters: April 9, 2007

>

> Supreme Court's EPA ruling deserves coverage

>

>

> Re: "Hurricane center sees active 2007 season," April 4

>

>

> Let me see if I can get this straight. On April 4, you run a > front-page story on weather forecasters predicting a "very active"

> hurricane season, with a "good chance" that one major storm will hit the Atlantic Coast.

>

> Yet one day earlier, your paper declines to even mention the U.S.

> Supreme Court ruling that the Bush administration's Environmental > Protection Agency must consider the impact of automobile carbon > dioxide emissions in the context of global warming.

>

> Increased weather volatility is precisely what scientific experts have > been telling us to expect from the global climate change caused by > human-induced greenhouse gas pollution.

>

> Is it part of The Examiner's agenda not to cover perhaps the most > significant Supreme Court decision of the decade, if not the century?

>

> William J. Snape III

> Senior Counsel, Center for Biological Diversity Washington, D.C.